New Lincoln County Manufacturer Bringing Jobs to the Region

WAYNESBURG, KY – New jobs are coming to Lincoln County, with some help from the state.

Tin Man Manufacturing, LLC will produce rolled steel for roofing panels as well as parts and trusses for the commercial building and construction industries. The startup company will create 34 jobs over a two-year period with an emphasis on hiring low to moderate income individuals, according to a news release from the state.

Gov. Steve Beshear, in conjunction with the Department for Local Government, announced a $680,000 Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) to support the new manufacturer. The Lincoln County Fiscal Court will use the funds to purchase equipment for a capitalize lease to Tin Man, which will be located in the Stanford-Lincoln County Industrial Park. The company will sell to clients located within a 1,000 mile radius of its location.

“I’m pleased to award this grant to help Lincoln County attract a new company and it is especially satisfying that it will be locally owned and operated,” said Governor Beshear. “I applaud the Lincoln County Economic Development Authority and the fiscal court in their ability to build on this successful relationship.”

Tin Man is owned and operated by current Lincoln County residents O’Neal and Charlene Dishon. The Dishons also are partners in All Seasons, Inc., a company operating in southern Lincoln County that was established in 2003.

“We are thrilled that the Dishons have decided to expand their investment and bring jobs to Lincoln County,” said Judge-Executive Buckwheat Gilbert. “Small companies make a big difference to our community.”
